

THE IMPACT OF SELF-PAYMENT ON YOUR VENDING MACHINES

The market for self-service beverage dispensers is constantly evolving, with growing demand for innovative solutions to simplify and enhance the user experience.

More and more consumers are switching from cash payments to contactless, cashless electronic payment methods (bankcard, QR Code, RFID system).

Purchasing habits are changing, cash is becoming increasingly rare, and cashless payment methods are often preferred.

Self-service solutions offering cashless and contactless payment are becoming increasingly popular, even in large companies, and here's why:

SELF-SERVICE

- Speed:
Employees and other consumers can serve themselves at their convenience, without depending on staff availability.
They make their purchases quickly, without having to queue, which is crucial during limited breaks in companies, for example.
- 24/7 availability:
Vending machines can be accessed outside operating hours, offering maximum flexibility.
- Autonomy:
Users appreciate the autonomy and simplicity of the self-payment process.

CASHLESS

- Less money handling:
Reduced risk of contamination and germ transmission, particularly important in work environments.
- Instant transaction:
Payments are made quickly, improving traffic flow in the cafeteria or coffee corner.
- Transaction security:
Electronic payment systems can offer greater traceability and security against fraud.

FOR COMPANIES AND OPERATORS

- Fewer staff needed:
Reduced need for personnel to manage transactions.
- Sales tracking:
Vending machines can provide real-time sales data, facilitating inventory management and analysis of consumption patterns.
- Automated maintenance:
Modern systems can automatically signal maintenance or replenishment requirements.
